Making a mooncake feel like a daily treat

Pia & Pia sells premium pia bulan, the flaky mooncake pastry with a golden salted egg yolk centre, in flavours such as pandan, red bean, black sesame, lotus and durian. Customers buy through Shopee and Tokopedia, so the feed has to build appetite fast and point people to the shop.

I designed the full visual system and produced 15 square posts plus a phone mockup. Content and copy came from the client, so my focus was on layout, product styling, hierarchy and a consistent warm look across every flavour.

One product, fifteen reasons to stop scrolling

A mooncake feed has an obvious risk. Every flavour is a round golden pastry on a plate, and a grid of near identical photos quickly turns into wallpaper.

The goal was to keep the product looking premium while mixing in humour, people, reviews and polls, so the feed feels like a brand with a personality rather than a catalogue.

1

Look delicious

Warm light, glossy fillings and clean cutaways make the pastry the hero.

2

Tell flavours apart

Each flavour gets its own props, such as seeds, beans, leaves or fruit.

3

Add personality

Funny hooks and real reactions give the brand a human voice.

4

Drive to the shop

Clear marketplace messaging sends interest to Shopee and Tokopedia.

Sweet, cheeky and a little bit dramatic

Snack lovers

Relatable hooks like Kamu stress and Reaksi aku setiap saat turn a pastry into a mood fix.

Gift and festive buyers

Premium hero shots with clean podiums suit people choosing something special to share.

Marketplace shoppers

A clear Available at message shows where to buy, right on the feed.

Tone of voice: Casual Bahasa jokes sit next to simple English lines such as Sweet memories in every bite, which keeps the brand friendly, modern and easy to share.

Golden hour on a cream stage

The pastry is the star

Every flavour is shown cut open on a round podium, so the golden yolk and the colour of the filling are visible at once.

Maroon type with a glow

Heavy maroon headlines with a soft white edge pop against the cream backdrop and tie the whole feed to the brand red.

Props that tell the flavour

Pandan leaves, red beans, black sesame, lotus seeds and durian fruit make each flavour readable before any text is read.

How a flavour post is built

Six ways to talk about one pastry

Flavour heroes

Cutaway shots for sesame, red bean, lotus, durian and pandan.

Humour hooks

Relatable lines such as Kamu stress and a Warning about getting hooked.

Social proof

Star reviews from customers in a clean message card.

Mood and lifestyle

A smiling customer and a Good mood headline sell the feeling.

Engagement

Kamu tim mana asks followers to pick ori or egg yolk.

Where to buy

A premium hero with Shopee and Tokopedia marks in the phone mockup.

Five flavours, five prop stories

● Black sesame

A wooden bowl and a scoop of seeds.

● Red bean

Whole beans scattered beside the pastry.

● Lotus

Lotus seeds and a white flower.

● Durian

Fresh durian segments behind the cake.

● Pandan

Green leaves wrapped around the base.

The layout stays the same while the props and filling colour change, so each flavour is easy to recognise.

Humour hooks with a human face

● Kamu stress

A tired face and a plate of mooncake make the pastry the answer.

● Warning

A blissful bite turns a caution tag into a compliment.

● Before and after

Two polaroid reactions add a playful meme moment.

● Sweet memories

A calm, smiling moment closes the set with warmth.

Social proof, polls and callouts

● Customer reviews

Five star message cards in simple Bahasa build trust without heavy design.

● Team poll

Two podiums, ori and egg yolk, invite followers to comment and pick a side.

● Flavour callouts

Curved arrows with Soft bite and Fragrant and savory describe taste in two words.

● Legit taste

The same arrow style on red bean keeps the callout system consistent.

Good mood, with mooncake letters

The typographic post replaces the two O letters with cutaway mooncakes, so the word and the product become one image.

OK Letters as props

A chocolate yolk cake and a pandan cake sit inside the O shapes, which keeps the headline playful and on brand.

OK Label above

A maroon pill sets up the sentence, so the big word lands as the punchline.

OK Works without a photo

No people or props are needed, which makes it a quick, reusable template.

Sending the feed to Shopee and Tokopedia

The mockup shows a premium hero post with an Available at line and the two marketplace marks, placed inside a real Instagram frame.

OK Clear call to action

Shoppers see exactly where to buy before they read the caption.

OK Premium first impression

A bright, wide hero with three flavours lined up shows the range at once.

OK Readable in context

The mockup confirms that the headline and badges hold up on a small phone screen.

Fifteen posts, one grid

Flavour heroes, people, reviews and typographic posts alternate across the grid. The mix keeps the feed lively, while the maroon, cream and gold system makes every row look planned.

- OK Balanced rhythm
Product shots and people take turns, so the eye never gets bored.
- OK Repeated anchors
Maroon headlines and cutaway cakes appear in every row.
- OK Warm consistency
Cream and gold stay the base, with red as the one strong accent.

What this project shows

01

A system keeps variety under control

One stage, one headline style and one palette let fifteen different posts still read as one brand.

02

Humour makes food memorable

Relatable hooks and real expressions give a pastry an emotional reason to be noticed.

03

Show the inside

Cutaway fillings and golden yolks make the product look rich, fresh and worth the price.
