Selected campaign direction

01 Project Overview

This project explores a premium carousel direction for Cif using the supplied Cif product imagery as the foundation. The visual language was developed to feel clean, modern, warm and editorial rather than overly commercial. The system combines generous negative space, strong typography, soft natural lighting, fresh green accents and product photography to create a cohesive story across five independent slides.

The central idea is simple: make cleaning feel aspirational. Instead of presenting the products as isolated household items, the campaign places them inside a lifestyle world built around freshness, confidence, comfort and beautifully maintained spaces.

Challenge	Create a polished campaign system from existing product references while keeping Cif immediately recognizable.
Objective	Build five separate carousel visuals that can work individually while still reading as one campaign.
Audience	Modern households and lifestyle focused consumers who value effective cleaning and a fresh home environment.
Visual Direction	Premium editorial photography, cream and white space, Cif green, elegant typography and natural lifestyle cues.

02 Creative Approach

The reference layouts established a clear visual principle: one strong image, one strong headline, restrained supporting copy and a generous amount of breathing room. That principle was translated into the Cif system rather than copied literally.

Brand Colour

Cif green is used as the primary recognition colour. Cream, white and very soft neutral tones support it so the green remains distinctive without overwhelming the photography.

Typography

Large editorial display lettering creates a premium magazine feel. Supporting copy uses a simple, readable sans serif treatment so the hierarchy stays clear on social screens.

Image Direction

The imagery combines product beauty shots with lifestyle photography, human presence, natural foliage, reflective surfaces and soft studio light. This gives the campaign a warmer emotional layer while keeping the products central.

The visual system was intentionally designed to make every slide feel like part of the same premium brand story.

04 Design Process

01	Reference Analysis	Studied the supplied reference pages to identify composition, scale, whitespace, image placement, typography hierarchy and navigation details.
02	Brand Translation	Mapped the reference principles to Cif using the brand logo, green colour family, product photography and a fresh cleaning focused tone.
03	Content Structure	Defined the role of the headline, supporting message, product imagery, benefits and navigation so every slide has a clear reading path.
04	Visual Composition	Balanced photography and typography using strong asymmetry, large display type and generous negative space.
05	Carousel Consistency	Repeated key visual rules across all five slides while varying the composition so the sequence does not feel repetitive.
06	Final Presentation	Refined spacing, hierarchy, product scale and supporting details to create a premium portfolio ready campaign system.

10 Intended Outcome

The resulting system is designed to give Cif a more editorial and lifestyle driven presence across social media. Each visual can communicate on its own, while the five slides together create a clear campaign rhythm from lifestyle introduction to product focus and brand reinforcement.

What the system achieves

1. Creates stronger visual consistency across multiple carousel slides.
2. Uses Cif green as a clear brand recognition device.
3. Balances product visibility with human and lifestyle storytelling.
4. Introduces a premium editorial tone without losing product clarity.
5. Creates flexible layouts that can support future product campaigns.
6. Provides a reusable visual direction for social media communication.

Note: this case study presents the design direction and intended communication value. It does not claim measured campaign performance or commercial results.
